

Problem Statement

Many college students struggle with time management, which can result in academic decline.

Details

College students who are participating in several extracurricular activities and have a lot of classes may struggle with managing their time. The problem is that this causes them to have less time to study and do homework. I feel like this problem would present itself the most in freshman who have not experienced college or heavy workloads and extracurricular activities. This problem matters because it causes a decrease in academic success.
